■ Bridging the Gap – Helping Alcoholics Transition from Treatment to Recovery ■

A Service Opportunity in Alcoholics Anonymous

What is Bridging the Gap (BTG)?

Bridging the Gap connects Alcoholics Anonymous (A.A.) members with individuals who are completing treatment or leaving correctional or healthcare settings and need help finding meetings in their home community. Temporary contacts meet these new or returning members and accompany them to their first few A.A. meetings—helping "bridge the gap" between a facility and local A.A.

Why It Matters

Many people in treatment or transitional programs want to continue their recovery in A.A. but may not know where to start. Having a friendly A.A. member meet them, answer questions, and attend a meeting together often makes the difference between isolation and connection.

How You Can Help

- Volunteer to be a temporary contact (matched by gender and, when possible, age).
- Share BTG information at your group, district, or Intergroup.
- Encourage treatment and transitional facilities to reach out for collaboration.

BTG is a short-term service commitment—just enough to help newcomers find their footing and begin their A.A. journey.
